

RAILROAD WILL INVADE ALBANIA

Only Country in Europe
That Knows Not the Locomotive Whistle.

Washington.—The steam engine is about to invade the only "railroadless" country in Europe," says a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society; "for Albania is planning the construction of a 24-mile road from Durazzo, on the Adriatic coast, to Tirana.

Thus Albania parts company with Afghanistan, Asir, Bhutan, Nepal, Oman and Yemen, in Asia, and Liberia on the west coast of Africa.

"Liberia is probably the only one of the seven countries that would have a railroad if it could," continues the bulletin. "The other six are voluntary adherents to a policy of 'splendid isolation,' and efforts to establish twentieth-century commercial facilities have met with disaster.

"Largely due to the lack of funds, the little negro republic, which is about the size of Indiana, has hardly scratched the surface of its resources. For some fifty or sixty miles back of the coast the land has been cleared and partly developed, but from that imaginary line inland there are dense forests and extremely primitive peoples. The President of Liberia visited the United States in 1921 to secure credit for his country, which has always been considered potentially one of the richest corners of Africa.

"With the investment of American capital, notably the establishment of a great rubber plantation, and the development of the country by a progressive local administration, the thousands of negro porters who now carry huge loads of 'freight' on their heads, will, perhaps, soon give way to more modern transportation.

railroadless countries—about fourteen times larger than Albania, yet no railroads or telegraph lines cross its border. The smelter has consistently objected to these facilities for fear of opening his domain to aliens who are no more welcome now than they were a century ago. Only a few foreigners, mostly British, have been allowed to enter; the country for short sojourns. Foreign engineers and doctors whose services are badly needed, if allowed to cross the border by the grace of the smelter, are subject to surveillance. Ambassadors, ministers, and even missionaries, are unwelcome.

"Camels and pack horses are depended upon almost entirely for transportation in Afghanistan, but it is not uncommon to see elephants and even wheelbarrows on the trails. Some of the caravans number more than 120,000 animals, loaded with skins, dried fruits, assorted gums, and spices.

"To insure complete isolation, the few roads into the country are well guarded. The chief route lies through Khyber pass, the largest gateway from India. It is open two days a week except in hot weather, when it is available one day only. The smelter's agents scrutinize all who pass the gateway, and even Moslem caravan guides are displaced by Afghans who proceed inland. From sundown to sunday the pass is closed to all traffic.

Has No Welcome Mat.

"Nepal and Bhutan, lying among the peaks of the Himalayas—the former with Mount Everest, the highest peak in the world, along its border, have only slight hopes of extensive railroad transportation. To traverse or tunnel the Himalayas would be a herculean task.

"While Bhutan displays some friendliness toward foreigners, Nepal is another country that is none too anxious for visitors. The roads piercing the border of Nepal are purposely kept in bad shape and built over unnecessarily difficult country. With the exception of the British resident and a few other European officials, no one is allowed to visit the country without special permission from the durbar. When permits are issued visitors must travel by one particular route, and they are not allowed to go beyond the valley of Katmandu, a tract of country about 300 square miles. In consequence of this seclusion, the internal administration has remained almost entirely unaffected by modern influence.

"The 'no trespassing' sign also isolates Yemen, Asir and Oman from progressive commercial development. These states are little more than cesses on the rim of the Arabian peninsula, with their back doors opening into the great desert. Yemen and Asir border the Red sea, which, we are told, the children of Israel crossed dry-shod, and have existed there with little change since that time. Oman surrounding the southern end of the peninsula, while yet backward, is beginning to awaken. Until recent years much of her 82,000 square miles has not even been explored and her mineral resources untouched, but a lively trade with India is now being developed."

She was removed to the Kingston City Hospital where it was found she had sustained a fractured skull, a fractured wrist and other injuries. Her condition is reported as serious at the hospital.

Dr. Frenzel Says He Was Kidnapped

Chicago, Dec. 13 (AP)—Dr. William Frenzel, oculist, explained today why he left his fiancée waiting at the church last night. He said he had been kidnapped by four men, doped and held prisoner for 37 hours. Upon returning to his office today, he found Miss Barbara Truella, whom he was to have married, waiting after an all-night vigil with two policemen. His prospective mother-in-law later joined the group and the policemen departed when it was announced the wedding probably would be performed today or tomorrow.

On leaving the Truella home early Sunday, the doctor said he had been thrown into an automobile and the next he knew he found himself in Evanston at six o'clock this morning.

No mention was made of his clerk who is said to have told Miss Truella she would never marry Frenzel. Five years ago in Kansas City, Mo., Frenzel married a Miss Edna Jones and was subsequently divorced.

Wynne's New Day-Way Opening.

Tiers, Tucks and Tunics Lead Mode

Summary of Season's Offerings at Paris Autumn Style Shows.

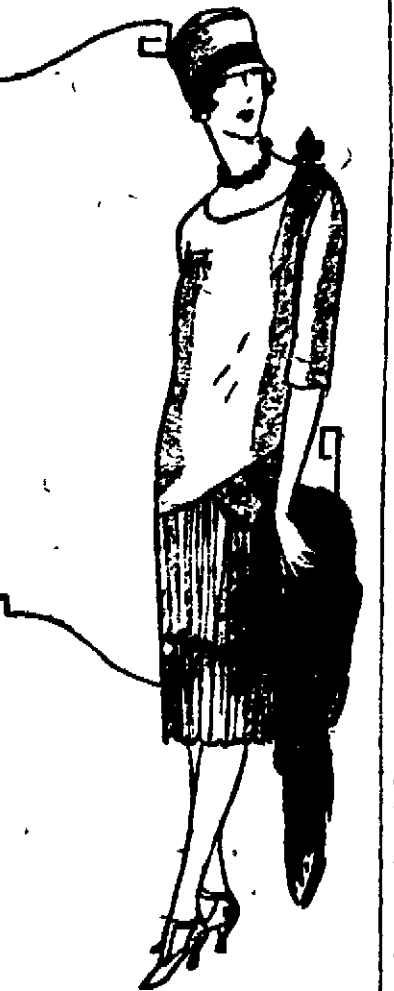

The Paris autumn openings, now completed, offered a greater diversity of themes than in many years, yet curiously enough the members of the haute couture have seldom agreed so well on the fundamentals. Thus, the bloused back finds a place in nearly every collection—the raised, defined waistline is sponsored by a majority of the Paris salons—the loose bodice and the straight silhouette take the place of the molded bodice and the belted flare. And where simplicity was once the essence of the mode, intricate styling is now the quintessence.

Details are numerous—tiers, tucks, shirtings, flounces, tunics—all these and many others are employed to elaborate the once more straight silhouette. All of them have their place—the new fall mode has acquired a complex for decoration which can only be compensated by an infinite variety of elaborate details. In the appended sketches outlines of the Paris fall openings, notes a fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune, the different methods of intricate design employed by the various members of the haute couture are presented.

Higher Waistline.

A higher waistline, emphasized by belts or belted effects, profuse use of the bolero, and a marked preference for black are the outstanding characteristics of the autumn collection of Gabrielle Chanel. True to her traditions, this eminent designer maintains a youthful atmosphere throughout her new models, but the effect is arrived at, not by simplicity but through skillfully masked elaboration. Thus tiers, panels and loose wing draperies are employed so cleverly that their elegance never strikes the observer's eye. The silhouette is straight, and the skirt length remains either the same or else manifests an occasional tendency to lengthen. Pointed draperies, falling below the hemline in back, frequently lend the effect of a longer skirt. Fringe trimming, in chandelle and sequins, is noteworthy. Among the fabrics velvet, georgette, crepe de chine, chiffon and novelty wools stand out. After black the favored colors are royal blue and purple.

The Worth silhouette remains as short as last season, but has discarded the belted flare for a rippling straight line. The bloused back is featured, rather flatter than the characteristic effect of the season. Attempted before effects are also stressed. A deal of elaboration centers around the waist. There are sequined treatments which give the effect of a diagonal line, there are mashings in back, beginning at the waistline, and there are numerous tucked and shirred effects centering at the same point. The trend toward elaboration reaches its height for the evening mode in highly brilliant metallic brocades and high colored chiffon velvets are decorated by exquisite bead embroideries, lace and fringe trimmings, the last a most significant theme for autumn. Velvet, chiffon and crepe are the leading afternoon frock fabrics, while velvet and rayon velours are noteworthy coat materials.

Dark-Mounted Bodice.

Both the black-mounted bodice and the raised waistline are featured in the new autumn collection of Jean Patou. The former appears principally on frocks, although a few coats also employ the theme. The raised waistline is particularly evident at the front, and is usually combined with a fully draped effect at the back of the skirt. Ostrich and feather trimmings replace to some extent the beading for ornamentation of last season and indicate the very feminine atmosphere which pervades the new Paris mode. The silhouette in both dresses and coats is straight, and at-though it is not slender it is rather less full than the typical autumn outline. Tiers appear frequently; sometimes replaced for evening by large upon layer of tulle. Contrasting sheaths of black and white velvet are offered for evening. Invariably embroidered with a lavish sprinkling of rhinestones or paillettes. Velvet, flat crepe de chine and georgette are the principal afternoon fabrics, while chiffon, crepe-satin and crepe de chine show the way for evening. Purple, rust and the wild shades are the outstanding colors in sports wear colored cardigans or suede jackets are smartly combined with white cloth skirts. Frequently jumpers are worn underneath, either cardigans or sleeveless jackets. Sports coats are straight and developed in substantial plain wools or some such wearable material as antelope. O'Rosen stands alone in the ranks of the haute couture. Aptly dubbed the man-tailor of Paris, his creations consist solely of coats and suits, generally developed along mannish lines. There are no afternoon frocks or evening dresses in his collection. This year, however even O'Rosen has succumbed to the lure of elegance, although of course not nearly to the same degree as his associates. For one thing, the waistline is raised, just as it is in the more feminine salons. Fabric contrasts in tailored suits are the rule. Thus, a smart O'Rosen tailor consists of a tailored blouse of plain or checked crepe over which is worn a sweater waistcoat of velvet. The jacket and coat of this suit are of a fancy Rodier woolen, thus incorporating three distinct fabrics in a single tailor. Among the tailored suits the long jacket, reaching to about three inches above the skirt hem, is a significant note. Short jacket tunics are generally double-breasted and with flat backs. Among the coats the bloused back and the bolero are the outstanding silhouette types. Voluminous cape-sleeves are also significant portraits of the influence of elegance on the usually severe tailleur.

Ostrich Feather Trimming.

The influence of feminine and intricate styling is particularly evident in the Drecoll fall collection. The bloused waist and the loose bodice are emphasized in the typical manner of the new autumn mode. Delicate ostrich feather trimming embroidered on both bodice and skirt, black and colored lace, and the employment of glittering laces and luxurious chiffon velvets frequently paillette are all evidences of Drecoll's flare for intricate styling. The most individual characteristic of the collection is the closely draped back achieved by the snug fitting of the bodice or by a narrow cut. This conforming effect is not only apparent across the hips, but outlines the curve of the back from shoulders to waist as well. Black is the leading color in the collection, after which come gray and white, as well as black and white combinations. Velvet and chiffon are the outstanding fabrics.

Clearly the eminent M. Poret has a sentimental affection for the mauve decade. For the second successive season he is offering skirts which sometimes reach to the ankles, and a silhouette modeled on the princely lines of the early nineteenth century. The waistline is higher and often biased by a series of decorative or embroidered pieces placed high at one side and low at the other. Decorative details, of course, are present in abundance. There are numerous tiers and boleros, Chinese and Puritan collars, profuse for trimmings, and even an occasional Directors motif. The bloused waistline is sponsored, emphasized usually by a giraffe. In general, the effect of the collection is perhaps a bit too old-style for the present temper of modern capitalistic, but it will conform well with the more mature tastes of the season. Louisbrougher has dropped the headline so that it reaches to about four inches below the knees, and as a consequence she has failed to achieve the raised waistline, elsewhere a trend.

BUY AT HOME.

Kingston's merchants have put forth their best efforts this Christmas holiday season to instill in the minds of the people of Kingston and Ulster county the advisability of buying at home. Their slogan "Kingston stores are best and Kingston prices are lower" has proven to be a fact from comparison.

Buying at home improves your community in many ways. It helps your merchants to carry better assortments, it improves their stores' appearance, keeps money at home, makes your community more prosperous, puts more money in local circulation, gives your town and county better appropriations from taxes paid by your merchants to the state.

The merchants are cooperating as never before to please you—to give you a real Christmas. They are spending thousands of dollars to do it. Give them your assistance.

MOTOR-BUS EXPANSION.

Motor-bus transportation "has come to stay, and with it have come great problems of regulation, rates, road use and taxes." Such is the conclusion of the New York National Bank of Commerce, after a survey of the rapidly growing motor-bus business. It seems that already there are in operation between 6,000 and 7,000 bus companies, with about 70,000 vehicles at the beginning of this year, and at the present rate of increase are likely four years hence to exceed 270,000. We read that in Iowa 20 per cent and in Michigan 20 per cent of the total railroad trackage is paralleled by bus routes; and that in Connecticut, West Virginia and Ohio the figure "from 40 to 50 per cent of the aggregate mileage of bus routes" parallels steam railroads or competes indirectly by connecting the same terminals. "An enormous diversion of traffic is the result."

"The number of passenger miles in steam railroad operation," says the report, "gained steadily up to 1920, when a high point of 47 billions was reached. Thereafter it slumped rapidly. In 1925 the total was less than 26 billion passenger miles, a drop of nearly one-fourth despite increased population. In the case of some railroads the decline amounted to one-third. Already the scheduled mileage of common carrier buses exceeds that of the country's steam railroads. If to this be added the routes covered by non-common carriers, the total greatly surpasses that of steam and electric railroads combined."

POLITICAL SHACKLES.

Those thirteen bottles, which recently caused the arrest of the Governor of Alabama and his party by enforcement officers, have performed a useful service. According to reports the Governor claims that they were a "plant," while some of his friends claim that they were (or contained) only grape juice. Obviously they could not have been both, and presumably the enforcement officers smell and tasted before they arrested, it being their bounden duty to be sure. Whatever their contents, those thirteen bottles and the arrest of high personages have resulted in much editorial comment and some very plain speech in the Southern press. For example, the Dallas, Ga., Citizen speaks right out as follows:

The South is politically dry, but personally wet. Many high officials subscribe to the Prohibition law for the purpose of getting office. Then they go out and smash the law to smithereens, just as do the common run of folks. No great number of people respect the Prohibition law except when they are talking before dry audiences or when they think they are in a confined wet could not be elected to high office in the South, though thousands of the voters drink from the cup that cheers. They drink wet and vote dry. They would not be intimidated. They are not. The answer seems to be that Southern politicians are. They have taken it for granted that they must continue to do the drinking and drinking is the key to the drinking and drinking is the key.

This is very plain speech to be heard or read in a Southern state and it is the political change, but it is not to be "blatant" in the language of a particularly pointed.

mous sort. Similar hypocrisy is nationwide, of course, but it seems rather more shocking in the boasted "bone-dry" South. The editorial utterance quoted above, however, would seem to indicate the coming of a time when there will be much less of such hypocritical pretense. The reason why sincerity and free speech in this connection have been rare is obvious. There is the fear of being accused of venality and unworthy motives generally, in the spirit displayed by another Georgian, the Carroll County Times, which, in rebuking other editors for favoring Governor Smith as a Democratic candidate for President, does not hesitate to insult them—as follows:

No amount of bulldozing on the part of these papers will induce the people of Georgia and the South to vote for a whiskey candidate for President, whether it be Governor Smith of New York or Governor Ritchie of Maryland. Nor can any amount of propaganda promulgated by the liquor syndicate, through these papers, accomplish this result.

Many a man, in the North and West as well as in the South, who would like to speak as freely as the Dalton Citizen, has restrained and muzzled himself for fear of being branded as the purchased tool of the mysterious "liquor syndicate."

That Body of Yours

COMMON SENSE REDUCING.

For the person who has simply allowed himself or herself get too fat, the cure is of course in their own hands. It is very annoying to know that you eat less than another man or woman your own age, and yet you increase in weight while they remain the same weight exactly.

It may be also that you take as much exercise at least, and yet do not prevent the increase in weight, simply because your tissues do not act toward food stuffs as does those of another person. You can work out this matter of overweight for yourself with the help of your physician, because overweight is not only annoying but it can become a menace to health.

Formerly all cases of overweight were told to eat less and work or exercise more. As a matter of fact this advice, if followed, would correct most cases of overweight. However there are those individuals who have always been overweight, practically from birth, or immediately after emerging from youth to manhood or womanhood, that is fourteen to sixteen years of age.

A French physician before undertaking to reduce a patient's weight uses the basal metabolism apparatus, which as you know measures the amount of work the body does when it is lying at complete rest and no digestion going on. Now the reason some individuals find it hard to reduce their weight, is because their processes are not working as hard as they should, and the fat does not get burned or used.

In this type of case this physician would use thyroid extract to help make the tissues burn up the excess fat.

Where the individual is overweight, and the apparatus shows that his processes are working real hard and yet do not burn up the surplus weight, he advises a real common sense treatment, and that is the cutting down on the food intake.

You see even if they are not eating very much their particular processes do such a good job on the food that they get enough material to keep their tissues well built up, and also a surplus which is deposited in the form of fat.

In other words, why carry too much extra weight when if the reduction is made from a scientific standpoint, there is not only no danger attached thereto, but really an improvement in general health and strength.

Today's Story in New York History

By Frederic A. Godcharles.
 (Copyright, 1926, by the Author)

Robert Livingston Founder of Manor of Clermont, and First Ancestor of the Family in America, Born, December 13, 1684.

Robert Livingston, the first ancestor of the family in America, was born on December 13, 1684, in Ancram, in Teviotdale, Roxburghshire, Scotland. His father, John Livingston, was a Scottish Presbyterian divine, who was banished in 1663 for non-conformity and went to Rotterdam, where he died in 1672.

Robert learned the Dutch language in his adopted home and in 1674 emigrated to America. In 1676 he held responsible employment in Albany as secretary of the commissaries, which office he held until Albany became a city in 1686.

In the latter year he received from Governor Thomas Dongan a grant of a large tract of land, which in 1715, was confirmed by a royal charter from George I., erecting this, and other lands acquired by purchase of the Indians, into Livingston Manor.

The first conveyance of land to Robert Livingston was dated July 12, 1683, and was for 2,000 acres on Roelof Jansen's Kill. The deed was executed by two Indians and two squaws.

This patent bears date July 27, 1685, and comprised 160,000 acres on the Hudson River. The additional privileges of electing a representative to the general assembly of the colony, and two constables were conferred upon the tenants.

Of the manors created in New York, the principal of which were those of Rensselaer, Livingston, Cortlandt, Philipsburg and Beekman, that of Livingston was, with the exception of the first, the largest, though not comparatively the richest or most valuable. This manor embraced large parts of what are now the counties of Dutchess and Columbia. Nearly 6,000 acres were taken from it as a settlement for the Palatines, who came out with Governor Robert Hunter in 1710, which grant was called Germantown.

Robert married, about 1683, Alida widow of the Reverend, sometimes called Patroon, Nicholas Van Rensselaer, and daughter of Philip Pieterse Schuyler, by whom he had three sons, Philip, Robert, Jr., and Gilbert. Robert Livingston died in Albany, April 20, 1725.

Philip, who succeeded to the manorial estate, was born in Albany, July 9, 1686. He was for some time deputy secretary of Indian affairs under his father, and on the resignation of the latter in 1722, succeeded to the secretaryship. In 1709 he was a member of the Provincial Assembly, county clerk 1721-1749, and a member of the Provincial Council until his death, in New York city, February 4, 1749. He married Catherine, daughter of Peter Van Brugh, of Albany, and during the latter part of his life entertained with great magnificence at his three residences in New York, Albany and the manor. Among his children were Robert, who succeeded to the manor as its last lord; Peter Van Brugh, merchant of New York, who married Mary Alexander, sister of Lord Stirling; Philip, signer of the Declaration of Independence; John, also a merchant of New York; William, Governor of New Jersey; Sarah, wife of William Alexander, Lord Stirling; Alida and Catherine.

Thirteen thousand acres of land were set off by the last will of Robert Livingston, the first lord, to form the "Lower Manor of Clermont," which was given to his second son, Robert. Here the latter built a large stone house, which in his old age, he gave to his son, Judge Robert R. Livingston, in whose family he lived until his death in 1778. Just after the eventful battle of Lexington.

The "Lower Manor of Clermont" was given to Robert by his father as a reward for having discovered and frustrated a plot, which had been formed among the Indians, for the massacre of all the white inhabitants of the Province.

Robert R. Livingston, second son of the first proprietor of Clermont, was born in August, 1718. In 1760 he became judge of the admiralty court; in 1763 Justice of the New York Supreme Court. He also served in the Provincial Assembly, and the Stamp Congress. He married Margaret, daughter of Colonel Henry Beckman. His daughter Janet, married General Richard Montgomery, who died heroically at Quebec. His son Robert R. Livingston born November 27, 1746, was minister to France and first Chancellor of New York. He died February 24, 1813.

TOP OF THE TREE

"Good evening, Santa Claus," said little Maggie as she called up the chimney several weeks before Christmas. "I hope you're very well, Santa. I'll have sugar for the fire for your reindeer. I'll put it on my own little blue saucer."

"You know, Santa Claus, it is the blue saucer that came with the blue cup which you gave me two years ago."

"Do you remember, Santa Claus? You gave me a little blue set for my cocoa. I still have it all, though there is a crack in the tray and one cup leaks."

"But the other cup is all right, and the cocoa pot is perfect."

"I love that little blue set, Santa. Santa, have you been well all the year? I do hope so, Santa Claus."

"I hope you didn't get too tired after last Christmas, Santa. You brought me so many presents, and you brought the rest of my family lovely presents, too."

"Santa, I'd like quite a few things this year."

"I'd like a little pink pig more than anything else. I saw one that a friend of mine had and I'd love it better than anything."

"Santa, her little pig squeaks when she presses it. And the pig is such a pretty clean pink color. A very, very light pink shade."

"That's such a nice shade for a pig, especially for a pig to hold and love. We have pigs in the pig pen, but Santa, they get awfully dirty."

"And their mother never seems to care."

"Now, I wouldn't let my pig get dirty. That is, if you happen to give me a pig."

"I'd keep my pig so nice and clean. My pig would go to bed with me at night and sleep between nice, clean sheets."

"And I'd never let my pig go down cellar or get in the coal bin."

"I wouldn't let my pig go out in the woodshed. Sometimes I go out there, but I can wash my hands and my pig couldn't be washed so easily."

"I'd like some writing paper, Santa. If you can't give me the pig and the writing paper, don't bother about the writing paper."

"That would only be to answer and thank for presents. I can use my pad just as well."

"I'd like some hard candy and a new comb for my hair and a book and a chocolate Santa Claus. Of course it wouldn't look so very much like you or I'd not want to eat it up."

"But, Santa, I'd so love to have a little pink pig. If its eyes were pink it would be nice. Pinker eyes than its body, is what I mean."

"I'll talk to you again, Santa, but that is all for tonight. Good night, dear Santa Claus. My love to the reindeer."

Every night until Christmas Maggie called up the chimney to Santa Claus, and every time she spoke of the pink pig.

She knew just what she wanted, for she had seen the most lovable pink pig, and if she owned one she would love it more than any other toy.

And when Christmas came and all the presents were open Maggie did not find her pink pig. She had beautiful presents, but there was no pink pig, and though she knew she should not feel and when she had so much else, she did feel just a little sad.

Then suddenly she spied a pink pig right on the top of the Christmas tree. Ah, Santa has not forgotten. And he had chuckled, she felt sure, as he had put it there on the top of the tree for her to discover and to enjoy more than she would have if she had seen it first of all.

It was a perfect pink pig. Quite the sweetest pig that ever was.

Billy Was Stuck Up

Billy and Jean are neighborhood playmates. Recently, Billy had his tonsils removed at the hospital, and one morning, a week later, Jean returned from his home decidedly out of sorts.

"Why, Jeanie, how'd you happen to come home so soon?" inquired mother. "Didn't you and Billy get along well?" "No, we didn't," replied the little girl, diametrically. "Billy's so stuck up since his operation."

Girl Robbed Bank Merely for Thrill

Austin, Tex., Dec. 12 (AP).—Characterizing officials of the Farmers' National Bank at Buda as "saps" for allowing her to rob them of nearly $1,000 Saturday, Miss Rebecca Bradley, 22-year-old stenographer, today waited at her mother's home here while the authorities sought to determine whether $5,000 bond was sufficient for her release on a charge of robbery.

Although she declined to supply details of her escapade after being released Saturday night, she told officers how she drove her automobile to the small country town near here Saturday and after persuading the bank officials that she was a newspaperwoman assigned to write an article on the community, forced the cashier and another employee into the vault and escaped with approximately $1,000 in cash. She told officers she merely sought a thrill.

Bats' Good Service

Dr. Charles A. R. Campbell, the San Francisco bat authority, believes bats can be used to reduce to a minimum the havoc wrought on the apple crops by the codling moth. This moth is particularly pernicious to the apple growers of the Northwest.

An apple grower of Selah, Wash., sent Doctor Campbell some of the codling moths and some ruano from bats of the Yakima valley. In the microscopic examination of this specimen it was ascertained that the food of bats in that vicinity was almost 95 per cent codling moths.

It raised in sufficient quantities to enable them to operate effectively it would be a blessing to the harassed Northwestern orchardists. The bats of south Texas have nearly eradicated the malaria-carrying mosquitoes in that section.

Ex-Empress a Stuart

My recent paragraph about the Stuart descent of the ex-Empress Zita has brought me a long letter of nine pages from Boston. The writer points out that the ex-empress is not only in the line of the throne of France through her grandmother, Princess Marie Therese of France. My correspondent adds that the ex-empress has always been proof of being the direct descendant of Louis XIV of France, and that she always has signed Zita de Bourbon-Parme, "which annoyed the old Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria very much." The same correspondent bids me keep my eyes on Signor Mussolini's attitude to the French Riviera. Think of all those details about the affairs of our poor Old World interesting Boston, Mass.—London Graphic.

"Gentleman" Defined

Within the last few years the French academy has officially received the word "gentleman" into the French language and incorporated it into the famous dictionary of that institution. An interesting feature of this is the definition given, since there has always been more or less discussion as to just what constitutes a gentleman. In this dictionary he is defined as "one in whom are combined a certain elevation of character with a certain elegance of manners." This is believed by many authorities to be a most apt description.

Unique Will

Written on an egg, a four-word will is in custody at Somerset house, London, while lawyers here are being prepared for and against the will's validity. The will is that of a sailor, who shortly before his death at sea inscribed on a blow shell of a bee's egg the words, "Mug, everything I possess."

MARY BRUCE had a position in the brokerage office of Graham & Kent because an old friend of young Hubert Kent had written to him asking him to do what he could to get Mary a job. Mary had been brought up in comparative luxury. Then her father all in one short year lost his fortune and died, leaving Mary practically penniless and unprepared to earn her own living. So Mary became the reception clerk and telephone operator at Graham & Kent's.

Mary was a pathetic figure—pretty and very neat, but never looking the part of downtown office worker. Hubert's old friend had told him of the expansive life Mary had lived, as her father's boon companion on his hundred-acre estate. So Hubert told Mary that he would like to be able to be helpful to her. Perhaps he could give her advice about her affairs.

"Thank you," said Mary sitting there at the switchboard. "I really would like a little advice right now. You see, after everything was settled there was little short of two thousand dollars left to me. That's my fortune." Mary smiled sadly and blushed a little.

"Well, I have had it in the savings bank but you know it yields practically nothing there. I wondered if perhaps I oughtn't to invest it." Hubert—relieved for Mary's sake to think that she had even so small a nest egg as two thousand dollars—told her he would think the matter over and when he was sure of something—something that was bound to go big—he'd let her know. He wouldn't think of advising her to buy stock on a margin, but something would come along that was a sure thing—so that she might make a few dollars.

A few days later Hubert Kent advised Mary to buy stock in the new X.Y. wire company. Hubert happened to have inside information. The stock was still low—but they were keeping it low on purpose. When they got ready they were going to send it way up. Hubert himself wasn't getting any. It was against his principles as a broker to dabble in stocks. His money was all in government bonds. But for anyone that really had to make some money that X.Y. stock was a great investment.

So Mary gave Hubert a check for her two thousand dollars and Hubert arranged the purchase of the stock.

A month later X.Y. stock began to fall. Hubert was told and passed it on to Mary that that was all part of the scheme. The men who controlled the stock were getting ready to do big things. In a few weeks or a month or so, Hubert said, there would be a big dividend and X.Y. would start to climb.

But there was no dividend and X.Y. did not start to climb. In fact, it continued to do just the reverse and before a year was over Hubert had to face the realization that X.Y. was hopeless and that through his advice Mary had lost her small nest egg. Gladly would he have reimbursed Mary for her loss but he knew that she would not consent to this. Hubert could not sleep nights. Somehow he would have to make up to Mary for what she had lost. It occurred to him that if he could introduce her to some young and eminently desirable man—some one really worthy of Mary—some one with plenty of money—with whom Mary would fall in love and who would marry Mary—then he would have made up for the loss. So Hubert took Mary to luncheon, introduced her to some of the older women he knew, met her at his country club and produced two or three bachelors whom he regarded as in a measure suitable. And Mary really made a very good impression though she was extremely unresponsive to the attentions of the men she met.

"I don't know how it is with the men you've known," said Hubert helpfully, "but these men are so used to girls that go more than half-way that when a girl is as cool as you are—well, they just make up their minds she isn't at all interested." "Well, I'm not interested," Mary told him, "at least not in them."

"Then—then you like some one else better?" asked Hubert with a funny sense of injustice and jealousy. "I do," said Mary.

Not long after that Hubert felt that the only way of making up to Mary was by offering his own heart and hand. There was a vague chance that she really cared for him—and besides he had had to admit he was in love with her. And of course Mary accepted.

"I never could forgive myself for having wrongly advised you about that stock," Hubert told Mary shortly after their troth had been pledged.

"I suppose I ought to confess," said Mary. "I said that stock three days after you bought it. I had a sort of hunch about it. So I said and then took a wild guess—bought on margin—S. P. & Q. I happened to over-hear something over Mr. Graham's wire and—of course, I'd a chance to learn a little about the stock market since I'd been here—and—"

"You must have cleared up a thousand or so—that was just Mary when S. P. & Q. went crashing—"

"I made almost four thousand," said Mary proudly. "You know I bought on margin. I ought to have told you, Hubert."

But Hubert was glad that she had not.

Everybody seems excited these days. People write letters in Italian; voters sweet and low have become obsolete; nothing any longer is either good or bad, everything is damn good or damn bad. And the less vocabulary people have to use, the more they do. — William Lynch Phelps in Southern Magazine.

Present Parole Law Not Enforced

Governor Smith's Commissioner Calls System "Under-manned Moral Cure"—Commends Plan of Automatic Release—Uncertain Parole An Incentive to Reform.

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 13 (AP).—George W. Alger, who investigated the state parole system as special commissioner appointed by Governor Smith after the parole of "Izzy" Prosser, notorious criminal, finds that the system as a whole is "an under-manned moral gesture" and that the parole law is not being properly enforced due to unwarranted actions and perfunctory methods on the part of members of the Parole Board.

His report, made public last night, adds, however, that "it is wholly unfair to conclude from the results that parole has been tried and found wanting."

The commissioner makes several recommendations for improving the system, chief among which are the abolition of the present part-time board and the appointment of three full-time paid commissioners and of additional parole officers.

Discussing the theory of parole and its administration in the state Mr. Alger recalls that the law sets as the test for parole the determination by the board as to whether there is "reasonable probability" that the applicant "will live and remain at liberty without violating the law."

"To apply this test to the individual case," says the report, "places upon the board what is, at least, a difficult duty. I do not find that this duty has been met by the board or seriously has been attempted. The chairman of the board frankly testified before me as to the past and present policy of the board, to the effect that even after the 'tightening up,' as he expressed it, within the last year, the board's policy was to put out on parole every prisoner at the earliest possible moment at which he might be paroled, except those who had violated prison rules, those convicted of robbery with a dangerous weapon, and sex offenders against women."

Reason for Early Release. Asserting that the board has held that to keep a man in prison after the expiration of his minimum sentence would be, in a measure, to usurp the functions of the court,

Commissioner Alger says he "cannot follow this interpretation." "The law does not tell the board," he says, "to assume anything about the operation of the judicial mind in the fixing of the sentence. It does not authorize any substitute for the difficult duty of finding a reasonable probability that the applicant for parole will remain at liberty without violating the law."

"If the mere failure to violate prison rules during the minimum period of prison," continues Commissioner Alger, "is substantially the sole test for determining whether a man is given parole, the substance and spirit and purpose of the parole law, and still more, the essential part of its potential value as an incentive to reform, are wholly lost."

"This fundamental misconception of duty lies at the heart of our parole system in state prisons," he adds.

Automatic Release Unauthorized. "A large part of our present difficulty," continues the report, "is due to the fact that because a substitute principle not authorized by law has been practiced by the board, the body of experience on the real problem of parole administration has not yet been obtained. The system has not grown. It has remained stationary and will continue to do so as long as this principle of automatic release on parole continues."

Commissioner Alger says he has been impressed "with the general non-informative character of the average parole file" as a basis of the board's determination as to whether the prisoner, if paroled, will not violate the law.

"I am convinced," he adds, "that far more facts are required and indeed are available, than are currently found in these reports, and which should be obtained both from prison officials and from outside sources. . . . It is the present unauthorized simplification of the test of parole . . . which I think enables the board to act with such apparent celerity in handling parole cases at their monthly meetings. . . ."

Parole supervision, after the board has acted, is insufficient, Commissioner Alger finds. He praises the Prison Association, the Catholic Protective Society, the Jewish Board of Guardians, the Salvation Army and the prison committee of the Christian Science Church for their work in this connection, but thinks all are overburdened.

After pointing out that the present system is meagerly financed, Commissioner Alger continues:

Two Alternatives Presented. "If we are justly dissatisfied with the present results of the state parole system in terms of public safety, it should be clear, I think, that an under-manned and under-manned system is not a fair test for parole. We are faced with only two possible alternatives. They are—a definite improvement in the parole system which will justify the policy of placing prisoners on parole under adequate supervision; or, a very great increase in the cost of facilities for keeping men in prison as a substitute for parole.

"Despite abuses and inadequacies, I do not believe that the time has yet arrived when the state must adopt a prison substitute for parole. I do not believe that the parole system has failed to any such extent. I believe that the system should be changed and improved, and when, and as improvement shows results, should be extended."

Uncertain Parole An Incentive.

An uncertain parole is an incentive to reform, Commissioner Alger asserts, adding:

"The transition from prison to the world outside of prison walls never should be made without a parole period, not only as an aid to reform but as a better means of learning whether a given case is one for ultimate freedom, permanent imprisonment or permanent custodial care. We should do one thing or the other. The present 'in and out' process is wasteful and unproductive of good results. . . ."

"Parole on a different basis in wire hands, I think, can be made the nucleus around which the reformatory or disciplinary features of imprisonment might crystallize. Parole commissioners devoting their full time to their duties, in daily contact with the prison population, and with an adequate staff at their disposal, should be given an opportunity to work out such a system. As they succeed and the confidence of the people and of the courts, in the significance and value of their work is established, their discretionary powers should be enlarged and the indeterminate sentence made more of a reality than in the case today. A system may be made possible in which effective reformation as well as punishment will be the studied efforts of our prisons."

Indians Without Salt

According to the "Handbook of American Indians," not all of the tribes of Indians were accustomed to using salt; whether from difficulty of procuring it, the absence of the habit, a repugnance for the mineral or for religious reasons. It is not always possible to say. Salt exists in enormous quantities in the United States, and it was not difficult for Indians to obtain it.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

MAN'S SHORTCOMINGS

DID you ever stop to think that with all man's boasts of his superiority he is, after all, a very incomplete and faulty creature, lacking in many of the qualities and accomplishments of those he looks down upon?

Do you realize that the squirrel can look much further into the future than the best educated man and forecast with measurable certainty events and conditions?

Do you know that the bear can voluntarily suspend animation and remain without food, with lowered heart action and diminished breathing for a period which would result in the death of any human being and suffer no bad result?

Did you know that the sense of smell is a thousand times more acute in the butterfly than in the human family?

You have observed that the ear of almost any animal is much more sensitive to noise than the ear of man.

The eagle, the house fly and the spider have eyes hundreds of times more efficient than the human optic and much more complicated in operation.

Did you know that a lobster which loses one of its claws can grow a new one just as good as the one he lost, but that man when he loses a hand or leg has to put up with an inferior substitute?

Did you know that an ant is capable of infinitely more exertion and continued labor than the man who with his heel ruthlessly destroys the work that the ant has done?

Did you know that in many of the lower forms of life when a tooth for any reason becomes worn or diseased and falls out another tooth grows to take its place?

Did you know that the bee is the most efficient architect in all the world of living things and that the beaver is a hydraulic engineer of surpassing intelligence and genius?

Do you realize that no one of the animal kingdom will voluntarily eat improper foods and no one of them ever acquires harmful habits.

The courage of the gamecock far surpasses that of man and the persistence of the spider totally eclipses that of his two-legged superior.

When we arise in the morning and,
looking in the mirror, compliment ourselves on our superiority, and when at night we review with pride and self-appreciation the accomplishments of the day it would be well for us to compare what we are and what we have done with the day's work and individual qualifications of the beasts and birds, the insects and all the other forms of life which we consider so far beneath us.

Be not above learning from those below you. There is nothing in creation which has not its lesson, its service and its worthwhile example.

Thrice Buried Bishop

At the Southwark cathedral in London on September 23, there was celebrated the thirtieth anniversary of the death of Bishop Andrews, who is known as the Bishop who was buried three times. He died in 1626 and was buried in a tomb which was surrounded by a canopy in the little Lady Chapel of St. Saviour's church, which is now Southwark cathedral. At the time of the fire in 1678, the canopy was destroyed, but the tomb and effigy were unharmed. The second burial took place in 1678, when the tomb was removed to a position in the Lady chapel immediately behind the high altar. In 1820 the coffin containing the remains of the bishop was removed to a position on the right-hand side of the high altar.

SEASONABLE DAINTIES

FOR those who enjoy all kinds of game, the following will be appreciated:

Jugged Hare.

Take one large hare, one-fourth pound of fat bacon, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of herbs, six small green onions, one tomato, a tablespoonful of jelly, the juice of half a lemon, two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt to taste, and one pint of stock. Cut the bacon into pieces and cut the hare at the joints. Fry the bacon, and fry the pieces of hare in the fat. Put bare, bacon and onion with half a tablespoonful of jam chopped, one-half tablespoonful of herbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, half a grated lemon rind, one teaspoonful of salt, a quarter teaspoonful of pepper, a dash of cayenne, three chopped mushrooms and two eggs. Mix all well, lay inside the hare and sew up. Place strips of fat bacon over the back of the hare and roast one and one-half hours.
Fifteen minutes before taking add the currant jelly. Take up the hare and make a sauce by thickening with flour and butter mixed.

Eggs Shredded With Sausages.

Prick six sausages all over and place around the edge of a baking dish and cook until crisp; pour off the fat and cut the sausages into inch pieces; break three eggs in the center of the dish, pour over two tablespoonfuls of the fat and set in the oven to cook
the eggs. Serve from the baking dish.

Baked Apple Slices.

Core apples before peeling, then cut into thin slices one-half inch thick after the apples are peeled. Place in a well-greased baking dish, giving each slice plenty of room to be removed when baked. Sprinkle with sugar, a bit of butter and a thick grating of nutmeg. Bake and baste with a bit of hot water to start with, then with the juice of the apple. When tender serve one slice with the meat.

Apples as sauce, in salad, fresh as fruit, to be eaten from the hand, baked in pie and pudding, the apple is the best of all fruit.

PHILCO Runs Any Radio from Your Electric Current!

"A" and "B" Socket Power

Convenient terms — $5.00 Down balance in six monthly payments

$2.50 to $5.00 allowance on your old battery.

It has been a long step from the home-made radio of three or four years ago to the marvelously efficient receiving sets of today. The maze of wires, conglomeration of parts, batteries and head phones, has given way to the modern set enclosed in a cabinet of a "period" design, which finds a place in the most carefully appointed home.

The Philco socket power which provides "A" and "B" battery supply is a complete radio power plant, enclosed in an attractive cabinet and is the final touch to the modern radio outfit.

Not only is it good looking, but it is wonderfully efficient. It insures a uniform voltage for the plate and the filament and relieves you of the attention which ordinary batteries require.

So great is the demand for Philco

Socket Power outfits that the manufacturers are having difficulty supplying them. We are fortunate in having received an allotment which will enable us to supply our customers with Philco sets during this Christmas season, on very attractive terms.

Prices are: For a 6 volt "A" Circuit $38.50, for "B" Circuit $37.50, for combining "B" Circuit and 6 volt "A" Circuit $71.50, and for combining "B"
Circuit and 3 volt "A" Circuit $62.00,
with a discount for cash.

Thought Magellan a God
In 1519 Magellan, Spanish explorer, discovered the Philippines Islands. Paul Harrison, now visiting the islands and writing of their history tells us. Two thousand native warriors met the Spaniards and refused to let them land until the title of the "blood compact" was observed. Placing Magellan's breast the native chief called and drank of his blood. Then Magellan did the same to the chief. This made them "blood relatives." The Spaniards landed, celebrated mass and baptized the natives and that is how Christianity was first introduced in the Philippines. But not long after this a native wounded Magellan with his spear to see if he really was human or a god. Magellan died and his human blood defiled the natives. They killed all of the Spaniards and closed the rest to their ships.

Boxing Cards at Madison Garden

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Rapid changes in Madison Square Garden scenery where the pine saucer of the bike racers Saturday night gave way to a hockey rink for a National League game last night today found a boxing ring set up in readiness for the resumption of the indoor fight champion.

The first of two cards this week will be staged tonight with three ten rounds bouts trying for feature places on the bill. Maxey Roanblom and K. O. Phil Kaplan, two rugged and still punching middleweight contenders of New York, set the first question of local supremacy in the final contest. Eddie Anderson, Wyoming cowboy, who is riding roughly through the leading battalions, meets Babe Herman of New York and Farmer Joe Cooper, slugging westerner who wields tactics All Mandol of England.

A heavyweight tournament of four ten rounds bouts, designed to clear the muddy challenger situation in that division, will be held at the Garden Friday night. Burley Graham of Cuba, N. Y., is paired with Tony Canzone, Rocky New York youngster. The remainder of the card brings together Carl Tremaine of Cleveland, and Andy Martin of Boston; Pete Sarmiento of the Philippines, and Dominick Petros of New York; Vic Burrows and Johnny Green, both of New York.

Re-elect Landis For Seven Years

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, will be re-elected for a seven year term at the joint meeting of the National and American Leagues in Chicago, Thursday, in the opinion of National League club owners in New York for their own league post-war tomorrow and Wednesday. The circuit is expected to vote for Landis as a unit.

But the managers of both leagues are chafing under the "benevolent despotism" of Commissioner Landis. The New York World said today. Dissatisfaction is felt over the belief that the high commissioner has ignored the existence of the advisory council, for no meeting has been called in the past two years, the paper said.

Red Shields at Catskill Tonight

The Bridge City Five of Poughkeepsie invaded the North Front Street S. A. court on Saturday night intending to scalp the Millerites but after a long and spirited contest the Poughkeepsie men were sixty markers in the rear. The final score was Red Shields, 72; Bridge City Five, 12.

The Salvation Army quater will journey to Catskill tonight where they will play the Dixie Orchestra Five on the "T" court.

Edna Miller's kids will no doubt strike one of their biggest snags of the season this Saturday night on the North Front street court. The Central Branch, Y. M. C. A. quater, of Albany will oppose the Red Shields in this contest. The Albany outfit is used to fast company, for besides playing teams of the highest caliber in the Capital City, they have a number of college aggregations on their season's schedule.

Rangers Beat Braves.

New York, Dec. 13 (AP).—The New York Rangers forced out a narrow 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Bruins last night in the only Sunday game played in the National Hockey League. The teams battled on even terms for seven minutes and 50 seconds of over time play before Ranger substitute lumbered in to winning tally.

Junior College for Women in N. Y.

Haverhill, Mass., Dec. 13 (AP)—A new junior college for women, which will be the first in New York state and one of the first in the country, and whose principal purpose will be to provide higher education for girls of American parentage not of the type sought by four year women's schools, will open in 1928 at Bronxville, N. Y.

It will be known as the Sarah Lawrence College in honor of the wife of W. V. Lawrence, wealthy main store druggist, who has given $1,250,000 to found the institution. Announcement of the gift and plans was made here last night by Miss Marion Coats, principal of Bradford Academy, who will be the first president of the Sarah Lawrence college. An exclusive two years' course is planned. A charter was granted by the New York Board of Regents last week and President Henry Noble MacCracken of Vassar College has been chosen chairman of the board of trustees.

Miss Coats is a graduate of Vassar, has done graduate work at Yale, Radcliffe and Wellesley and is president of the National Association of Principals of Schools for Girls.

The college will be situated in Lawrence Park, Bronxville, on property included in Mr. Lawrence's gift.

CANTATA AT RONDOUT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The choir of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, under the direction of Miss Virginia Lee Kamp, have prepared a Christmas cantata of unusual interest, to be given Sunday, December 19, at the 5 o'clock vesper service. The choir will be assisted by Mrs. Floyd R. Rich, solo soprano of the St. James M. E. Church; Harold S. Brigham, solo bass of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church; Joseph

H. Craig, solo tenor of St. John's Episcopal Church; William T. Hooker, Jr., tenor; Kenneth J. Doye, tenor, and Raymond E. DeBois, bass. The solo numbers of the cantata, "The Holy Infant," by Frederick Field Ballard, have been arranged by the composer with a real knowledge of the singing voice. A trio for men's voices, "We three kings of orient are," is most artistically harmonized. A pastoral, "Come hither, ye faithful," has as a closing quartet the beautiful and dignified Dresden Amen, "To God in the highest all glory be given."

A cordial invitation is extended to all.

LAST NIGHT on THE RADIO

Reception on Sunday and Sunday night was excellent both for those who wanted to hear the speaking and music and for the radio golfer who wanted to tune in the greatest possible number of stations. The advance crop of Christmas bloopers was somewhat in evidence. One radio golfer reports 61 stations received and says that anyone who remained awake late enough could doubtless have brought in Pacific coast stations.

WDBZ was very clear but not as strong as usual. It will be on the air Wednesday evening at 7, when Santa Claus will read and answer letters received from children. Later in the evening it will broadcast the basketball game.

One radio golfer reports 17 stations received Sunday before 6 o'clock.

Saturday night reception was almost as good as on Sunday. The Atlantic Broadcasting Corporation which has taken over the Globe stations, announces a change in call letters for the new super-power 3KW transmitter WAIG, to be known hereafter as WABC. The initial letter indicates the district and ABC the abbreviation of the Atlantic Broadcasting Corporation. WABC will take the air from the new studio atop Steinway Hall, New York, Friday night, December 17, at 7:30. Creswell MacLaughlin, editor of "The Schoolmaster" and one of the most eloquent of after dinner speakers, will say a few words about "Radio in the Home." The Balalaika Orchestra will present a group of musical novelties, after which a dance orchestra will play "till the dawn's early light."

MODENA.
Modena, Dec. 13.—A venison dinner will be given by the Modena Men's Club at Hasbrouck Memorial Hall, Wednesday evening, December 13, at 7 o'clock. The menu: soup, venison, roast, cold law, sweet potatoes, oysters, pickles, cranberries, rolls, coffee. Maria Washington mince pie. The dinner will be followed by a program of interesting speeches, vocal solos and instrumental music. The dinner is limited to 150 and those contemplating attending the meal will avoid disappointment by securing tickets early.

Mining Methods Changed
A great saving in mining costs is effected at the Consolidated Virginia Silver mine near Virginia City, Nev., by an underground concentration mill by which the surface ore is ground by electric power. It is the first underground mill in the world's mining history. By separating the tailings in the mine it is necessary to haul only the concentrates. Steam or compressed air plants were unsafe below ground, but nowadays electric mining equipment is made that is declared "guaranteed" by the United States Bureau of Mines.

SUMMERY SALADS

There is nothing in the food line which "touches the spot" equal to a fresh, crisp, well-made salad.

Tomato, Cucumber and Onion Salad.—If the tomatoes are small, cut them into halves; if large, into slices. Heap on each a mixture of a tablespoonful of onion to three of cucumbers, all cut into very small cubes, and marinated with French dressing. Top with a spoonful of mayonnaise dressing. If the onion is not enjoyed, or less is used, add celery.

Lemon Salad.—Prepare a package of lemon pudding, pour into a long shallow dish. When firm cut into small cubes and mix with pineapple, also cubed, and a little firm tomato for color. Heap on head lettuce and serve with mayonnaise.

Tomato Apple Salad.—Cook two cups of tomato and one onion for twenty minutes, add one teaspoonful of salt and two of sugar; when well dissolved strain and add four table-spoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in a tablespoonful of water; mix and stir until the gelatin is dissolved. Pour into molds and serve with shredded lettuce and mayonnaise dressing.

Cayenne Tomato Salad.—Peel three solid tomatoes, cut them into tulip-shaped forms by cutting nearly through from the blossom to the stem end. Place on a tender leaf of lettuce, add a teaspoonful of chopped onion to the center of each, fill with freshly grated coconut and sprinkle with a tiny bit of green pepper finely chopped. Prepare a French dressing using the coconut milk, lemon juice, seasoning and a little olive oil. Beat well and pour over the salad.

Tomato and Pears Salad.—This is a most delightful combination; each brings out the flavor of the other. Arrange tomatoes cut into eighth, pears also in eighths in alternating sections. Sprinkle with French dressing and then arrange on lettuce and serve with a rich mayonnaise dressing.

Do you speak of Jagers and Wesseltons
or just "diamonds"

If you know whether Jager diamonds are finer than Cape diamonds, Wesseltons finer than Pretoria, if you can distinguish blue-white from yellow or light brown, if you judge the value of a diamond by its proportion of width to depth—if, in other words, you are a true connoisseur of diamonds, you do not need our help in your choice of these fine jewels.

But if you are not a connoisseur, you will want to be guided in your selection of diamond jewelry by men who have mastered these matters of color, proportion and value. You will find secure only in a store whose men not only know all there is to know about the diamonds you choose, but who will tell you everything frankly while you choose.

Those people who are not connoisseurs come to us for honest guidance in their selection of fine diamonds.

And those people who are connoisseurs come to us for the assurance of the jewels themselves.

Throughout the many years of our business history we have earned and we now enjoy a reputation for selling merchandise of the highest character. Some people may confuse "HIGH QUALITY" with "HIGH PRICES" so we want to make it quite clear that Oppenheimer's is a "Store for Everybody"—for those who appreciate WORTH WHILE merchandise at reasonable prices.

We cordially invite you to visit our store—while we appreciate purchases we also welcome visitors—so that you to become familiar with our large and varied stock.
